CHARLES DICKERS. CHAPTER XIV-DEPORTMENT.

Concluded. Concluded.

I looked surprised and inquisitive. The old lady, becoming more and more incensed against the Master of Deportment as she dwelt upon the antiject, gave me some particulars of his career, with strong assurances that they were mildly stated.

He had married a meek little dancing-mistress, with a tolerable connection (having never in his with a tolerable connection (having never in his stried.

He had married a meek little dancing-mistress, with a tolerable connection (having never in his life before done anything but deport himself.) and had worked her to death, or had, at the best, suffered her to work herself to death, to maintain him in those expenses which were indispensable to his position. At once to exhibit his Deportment to the best models, and to keep the best models constantly before himself, he had found it mocessary to frequent all public places of fashionable and lounging resort; to be seen at Brighton and elsewhere at fashionable times; and to lead an idle life in the very best clothes. To enable him to do this, the affectionate little dancing-mistress had toiled and labored, and would have toiled and Labored to that hour, if her strength had lasted so long. For, the main-spring of the story was, that, in spite of the man's absorbing selfishness, his wife (overpowered by his Deportment) had, to the last, believed in him, and had, on her death-bed, in the most moving terms, confided him to their son as one who had an inextinguishable claim upon him, and whom he could never regard with too much pride and deference. The son, inheriting his mother's belief, and having the Deportment always before him, had lived and grown in the same faith, and now, at thirty years of size, worked for his father twelve hours a day, and looked up to him with veneration on the old inaginary pinnacle.

"The airs the fellow gives himself the said my the said the fellow gives himself the said my the said the day was the fellow gives himself the said my the said my the said the fellow gives himself the said my the said the fellow gives himself the said my the said the fellow gives himself the said my the said the fellow gives himself the said my the said the said the said the said the said the fellow gives himself the said my the fellow gives himself the said my the said my the said the said the said the said the said the said the sai and looked up to him with veneration on the old and looked up to him with veneration on the old inaginary pinnacle.

"The airs the fellow gives himself !" said my informant, shaking her head at old Mr. Turveydrop with speechless indignation, as he drew on his tight gloves: of course, meconscious of the homege she was rendering. "He fully believes he is one of the aristocracy! And he is so condessending to the son he so egregiously delutes, that you might suppose him the most virtuous of parents. "O !" said the old lady, apostrophizing him with infinite vehemence." I could bite you!" I could not help being amused, though I heard the old lady on twith feelings of real concern. It was difficult to doubt her, with the father and son before me. What I might have thought of them without the old lady's account without them, I cannot say. There was a fitness of things in the whole that carried conviction with it.

My eyes were yet wandering from young Mr. Turveydrop working so hard to old Mr. Turveydrop deporting himself so beautifully, when the latter came ambling up to me, and entered into conversation.

Ido naked me, first of all, whether I conferred a charm and a distinction on London by residing in it? I did not think it necessary to reply that I was perfectly aware I should not do that, in any case, but merely told him where I did reside.

"A lady so graceful and accomplished," he said, kissing his right glove and afterwards extending it toward the pupils. "will look lemently on the deficiencies here. We do our best to polish—polish."

"It as at down beside not take a real conference of the conference of th inversation.
If asked up, first of all, whether I conferred a

He sat down beside me; taking some pains to sit on the form, I thought, in imitation of the print of his illustrious model on the sofa. And really they certainly found none, on this occasion, wexchange a dozen words.

"My dear," said Mr. Turveydrop benignly to his son, "do you know the hour?"

"No. father." The son had no watch. The father had a handsome gold one, which he pulled out with an air that was an example to mankind.

"My son," said he, "it's two o'clock. Recollect your school at Konsington at three."

"That's time enough for me, father," said
Prince. "I can take a morsel of dinner standing, and he off."

"That's time enough for me, lather," said Prince, "I can take a morsel of dinner standing, and he off."
"My dear boy," returned his father, "you must be very quick. You will find the cold mutton on the table."
"Thank you father. Are you of now, father?"
Yes, my dear. I suppose," said Mr. Turreydrop, shutting his eyes and lifting up his shoulders, with modest consciousness, "that I must show myself as usual about town."
"You had better dine out comfortably, somewhere," said his son.

"You will excuss my inhalord," when the clother we moments that were occupied by Prince in taking leare of us (and particularly of one of us, as I saw, being in the secret,) echanced my favorable impression of his almost childish character. I felt a liking for him, and a compassion acter. I felt a liking for him, and a compassion with it his desire to stay a little while with Caddy—and went away good-humoredly to his cold incursors old lady.

The father opened the room door for us, and howed us out, in a manner, I must acknowledge, worthy of his shining original. In the same style he presently passed us on the other side of the town where he was going to show himself among the few other gentlemen left. For some moments I was so lost in reconsidering what I had heard and seem in Newman street, that I was quite unable to talk to Caddy, or even to fix no stuntion on what she said to me; especially when I began to enquire in my mind whether there were, or extent had been, any other gentleman, not in the damicion entirely on their Deportment. This became no my mind whether there were, or extent had been no neglected, that it was not lawns easier to cannot make up your mind to abandon this subject altogether, and attend to Caddy." I accordingly ald so, and we chatted all the rest of the way to Lincoln's Inn.

Caddy told me that her lover's education had been no neglected, that it was not always easy to make it clear, be would do hetter; but he put so many unnecessary letters in short words, that they sometimes quite less their English appearance. "He does it with the best intentions, or or or or or he would do hetter; but he put so mony unnecessary letters in short words, that he had prossed his whole life in the dancing he had prossed his whole life in the dancing he had prossed his whole life in the dancing and provided the provided he had prossed his whole life in the dancing and provided the provided he had prossed his whole life in the dancing had prossed his whole life in the dancing and provided the provided a make it clear, he would do better; but he put so many unnecessary letters into short words, that they sometimes quite lest their English appearance. "He does it with the best intentions," observed Caddy, "but it hasn't the effect he means, poor fellow?" Caddy then went on to reason, how could he be expected to be a scholar, when he had possed his whole life in the dancing-school, and had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not ing but teach and fag. If you had done not have the better the but the put to be let go free," said Krook, fag and teach, morning, noon, and night! And what did it matter? She could write letters enough for both, as she knew to her cost, and it was far better for him to be amiable than learned.

He sat down beside me; taking some pains to sit on the form, I thought, in imitation of the print of his illustrious model on the soch. And really he did look very like it.

"To polish—polish!" he repeated, taking a piach of snoff, and gently fluttering his flugar. "But we are not—if I may so, to organize to be graceful both by Nature and Art." with the high-shouldered bow, which it seemed impossible for him to make without lifting up his eyebraws and shutting his syes—"we are not—if and in point of Peportment."

"Are we not, sir?" said I.

"We have degenerated." he returned, shaking his head, which he could do, to a very limited extent, in his cavat. "A leveling age is not know befor me to say that I have been called, for some years now. "Indeed indeed," said I.

I glancod towards the centre of the room, where Miss Jellyby's lover, now engaged with single pupils, was undergoing greater drudgery than even.

"My aminble child," murmured Mr. Turvey-drop, adjusting his crivat.

"Your son is indefatigable," said I.

"It is my reward," said Mr. Turveydrop, "to "Your son is indefatigable," said I.

"It is my reward," said Mr. Turveydrop, "to hear you say so. In some respects, he treads in the footsteps of his sainted mether. She was devoted creature. But Woman, lovely Woman," said Mr. Turveydrop, with a very disagreeable gullantry, "what a sex you are!"

I rose and joined Miss Jellyby, who was, by this time, putting on her bonnet. The time allied to a lesson baying fully clapsed, there was a general putting on of bounets. When Miss Jellyby and the unfortunate Prince found an opportunity to become betrothed I don't know, but they certainly found none, on this occasion, to exchange a dozen words.

"My dear," said Mr. Turveydrop benignly to his son, "do you know the bour?"

"No, father." The son had no watch. The father had a handsome gold one, which he pulled out with an air that was an example to mankind. "My son," said he, "it's two o'clock. Recolet curreschool at Konsington at three."

"That's right. Good-by, father!" said Prince, shahing hands.

"Good-by, my son. Bless you!"

Mr. Turveydrop said this in quite a pious manuer, and it seemed to do his som good; who, in parting from him, was so pleased with him, so dudiful to him, and so proud of him, that I almost left as if it were as unkindness to the younger man not to be able to believe implicitly in the cider.

From the Lordon Ticara "The primary question for the United States in this election, as it for conselves in the electoral contest of this week, is the national sanction and inviolable establishment of the principles of Free Trade." The triamph of the candidate of the Democratic party, brought forward by the men of the South, will secure, probably forever, the everylancy of liberal commercial pation ples. men of the South Wil Section Commercial principles, the ascendancy of liberal commercial principles.

In this respect, and on this point, we take General Pierce to be a fair representative of the opinions of Mr. Calhoun, and as such a rather the practical aidy to the exempercial policy of this country.

"The election of General Pince will prote that the Democratic party, whatever may be their differences, are unanimous in their testimony on behalf of a liberal commercial policy, and any Government which he may form will be one on which the control of the control in the this country may rely for effectivel every retion in to during, wherever practicable, existing imped-ments to international intercourse." The leading British journals feel a strong interest in the election of General Preace, for reasons explicitly state in the extracts given above. He expected to be "a valuable practical MAY to the commercial policy of Great Britain,"-one on whom England " may rely for effectual cooperation," in the endeavor to crush manufactures in the United States, and render the twenty-five millions of the American people ab-dutely dependent on English Indoe. Their anxiety for his election is very natural. The American people, however, have not yet fully "conquered their prejudices" in favor of their own labor.

The Blight of Pethion—Ur. Pleaser's Voice.

It may be objected, perhaps, to this sketch that the Artist, being a Whig, has not flattered his subject. That cannot be said, however, in regard to the National Democrat, the party organ in New York City, whose editor attended the New York meeting, and gave his experience as follows:

"1st—The programme was not earlied out. 2d

The Old Solders at Nisgara.

Among the most striking incidents of yesterday was the introduction, briefly memtioned in my telegraphic report, of two old soldiers who had fought under Scott and Harrison. These veterans addressed the crowd in brief speeches and nithough it is frue their voices were weak and broken by age, yet their words were strong, and made a deep impression on all who heard them. Scregant Thompson, the soldier who had fought and bled at Lundy's Lane, and who had been plucked from a hearp of shin, hours after the battle had ceased, with some evidences of life renaining in him, spoke with indignation of the rumors which they told him had been spread abroad, that Scott was a creel man and a harsh tuler over his companions in arms. He would testify while his life and his speech was spared linn, to the falshood of each a charge. The little breath yet remaining is blief would be called a charge. and his speech was spared him, to the falshood of such a charge. The little breath yet remaining in him should be spont in denouncing such a report as a base and brutial slander. I am a living witcess yet, thank God," said the brave old man, "of the almost womanly tenderness with which that strong arm, so terrible in fight, can smooth the yillow of sickness and touch the writing form of the wounded—of the gentle tones in which that voice, so hursh and powerful upon the field of battle, can whisper consolution to the dying, and words of hope and comfort to the suffering." A great sensation was produced by the appearance of these old voteins.—Buffalo Commercial.

SENATOR DOUGLAR—It is said this gentleman promised to speak for Pierce in twenty-eight States during the Presidential canvass.—Cleveland Herald We have seen this announcement several times. Mr. Douglas has unquestionably pledged himself to speak in twenty-eight States. We were at first a little surprised at his not resolving to speak in the whole thirty-one States, but we remember now that there are three of them, Maine; Massachusetts, and Connecticut, in which the "Maine liquor law" is in force. Of course the Judge will keep clear of them.—Louisville Jour.

CASTRIO JUICE

PI REPARED from Remuel, or the fourth Romesh of the Ox, after directions of Beron Lichlighe great Ph stological Chemist, by J. S. Boughton, M. D., Philladel phils, Ps.

This is a truly wonderful 'remedy for Indigestion Dyspejats. Joundary of the Complaint, Constipation, and Debility, Curing after Nature's own method, by Nature's own Agent, the Gastrie Juice.

The Half a tempoonful of Press, infused in water will digest or disolve, Five Younds of Rosst Berf in about two hours, out of the stomach.

Persury is the chief element, or Great Digastive Principle of the Gastrie Juice—the Solvent of the Food, the Purifyling, Preserving and Stimulating Agent of the Stomach and Intestines. It is cutrotted from the Digastive Economic and Intestines. It is cutrotted from the Digastive Stomach of the Ox, thus forming an Artificial Digastive Hold, presizely like tool into Solvential Dispersion of the Stomach of the Ox, thus forming an Artificial Digastive Hold, presizely like tool into the points and without findeentic and Dyspepsis are removed, just as they would he by a health Stomach. It is doinly wonders for Dyspeptic Consumption, supposed to be on the verge of the grave. The Scientific Evidence upon which it is based, is in the highest degree Curious and Rusarkable.

hiracter and properties of Persis, and state many Inter-sing detaits respecting it.

The fact that an Artificial Digestive Finid, or Gastric-tice, perfectly resconbing the natural finid, may be readi-prequently does not admit of question. The only wonder t, that it has our before been applied to the ourse of indiges-on and Dyspepsia—so naturally does such a tree suggest selfet the mind. AS A DYSPEPSIA CUREM.
